Minority owned IT firm relocates to Baltimore City

Baltimore, MD (1/25/2008) – National Computer Services Consultants is pleased to announce that the firm has relocated its headquarters from the Baltimore County suburb of Owings Mills to downtown Baltimore in the Courthouse Square Building.

The move marked a return to the roots of the company's founder and President Carl Bly, who has called Baltimore City home for most of his life. As a minority owned and operated technology firm with both African American and female executives, NCSC is committed to employing a diverse workforce and hiring from the downtown area.

"Having grown up here in Baltimore, it is a special feeling moving my own IT firm to my home city," said Bly. "I haven't forgotten where I am from, and by hiring from the Baltimore City community we will play a role part in creating jobs and economic vitality in the city."

NCSC is committed to providing its partners with a stable, innovative, and socially responsible IT solutions with the most socially diverse workforce in the IT world. For more information, visit www.ncscnet.net.
